THE WILDERNESS

The Ordinance of 1785 provided for an orderly development of the west. All land was divided into townships six miles square, each township containing 36 sections, 640 acres each. Twinsburg was Township Five in the Tenth Range. Its first settler, Ethan Alling, found the land abundant with deer, bear, and rattlesnakes. The only road was a small path cutting through woods. Because of these difficult conditions, Twinsburg was the last township settled in Summit County. When Alling arrived on April 24, 1817, he was accompanied by three hired men. These men were alone until May 28, when Major Elisha Loomis and E. W. Mather arrived from New Haven, Connecticut. The first principal settlement was made on a tract of land owned by the Wilcox twins. There were three such tracts in Twinsburg, the Mills and Hoadly Tract (south and southeast part of town); the Henry Champion tract (west and northwest part of town); and the Wilcox tract (north and northeast part of town). Other early settlers in Twinsburg were Lewis Alling (Ethan's father), Samuel Vail, Luman Lane, Zeno Parmele, and E. Bronson. (Ellen Percy)

THE NAMING OF THE TOWN

The first actual name of our town was Millsville. Elisha Loomis and Elias Mather owned the south and southeastern part of Twinsburg and on their land was one sawmill and a grist mill. (The northern part of our town was owned, but not settled upon, by the Wilcox brothers.)

The final naming of Twinsburg happened in 1823 when three commissioners from Portage County were called to settle the name of Twinsburg. (Mary Curran)

THE FIRST BUILDING

Early in 1817 Lewis Alling raised the first house in this area, a one-room log cabin constructed on the square. The next year he built a frame barn and house. These were the first three buildings of their kind in the township. In 1817 Elisha Loomis erected a saw mill on the southeastern corner of Tinkers Creek. In 1818 E. H. Mather built a frame grist mill at the same place on the opposite side of the creek.

The early homes were very crude. Made of logs, with one room below and a loft above, they frequently sheltered large families. The fireplace was the only attractive feature indoors. The only utensils were a few cooking pots and the spinning wheel.

A log school house was erected on the square in 1822, by Samuel Bissell, and became the first public building in the town. This building served as a school, church, and town hall. (Connye Caldwell, Liz Balogh)

THE WILCOX TWINS

Moses and Aaron Wilcox were born in 1771 on May 11 in North Killingsworth, Connecticut. They first purchased land in Twinsburg several years before they came here. They owned the north and northeastern sections of the town. The twins, who were merchants, arrived in Twinsburg, then known as Millsville, on July 7, 1823. When they arrived, they lived in a blacksmith's shop that stood where the bank now stands.

In 1823, the twins gave the town six acres for a public square and twenty dollars for a school, on the condition that the town be renamed in their honor.

The Wilcox brothers succeeded in getting a Post Office at the Center as early as 1825 and Moses was the Town's first postmaster. Together, in life as in death, the brothers looked alike, thought alike, agreed on everything from religion to politics. There are two stories that are told about the twins. The first one concerns a time when Aaron had been to New England on a long visit. He returned home unexpectedly one night. Moses' daughter went to her uncle's home and found that he had returned. She hurried home to tell her father. "Yes," he said when she told him, "I know it, he came at ten o'clock last night." The only means of communication between the two brothers had been mental telepathy. The second story tells about a time when one of the twins could not make his usual weekly call upon the girl he was courting. So he asked his brother to go in his place. His brother spent the evening with the girl without her ever knowing it wasn't her usual caller, but his brother instead. (Dana Duzinski)

THE FIRST STORE

In 1825, Ethan Alling left the dairy business and built a tavern on the southeast corner of the square. When the stage route began running through Twinsburg, Alling's business grew. In 1829-30 snuff, tobacco, salt, flour, fresh produce, and other groceries were also sold.

Alling, enlarging his enterprise, built the present Dr. R. B. Chamberlin house and used it as a wing storehouse for his supplies.

The different varieties of country produce were bought and sold at the store, a business which did much to centralize the efforts of citizens in the village. (Marie Benoit)

THE CIRCUS

In 1852, P. T. Barnum brought his world famous circus to Twinsburg. One of the highlights of the performance was the appearance of the midget named Tom Thumb. It was his first year with the circus. He was 26 inches tall and became known the world over.

Professor Fessenden, who organized the first band, is the great-grandfather of the Henry Wau family whose children attend our school. The Criterion Band, which began in 1884, was the first that existed any length of time (ten years) and performed any notable part in the town's musical development. Some of its members were Otis Bennett, Ed Crouse, Bert Chamberlin, and Abner Lane.

The name Criterion was derived from a band of instruments purchased from Brainard and Sons of Cleveland. The men practiced twice a week in the old school at the east side of the square. The expenses were met by giving band socials. They also played for Decoration Day, fairs, soldiers' unions, and on other occasions. They chose S. D. Scoulten as leader after Professor Fessenden resigned and continued under his leadership until the band was discontinued.

Some of the other bands were the North Street Band, West Street Band, and Martial Band. Another was the Twinsburg Concert Band under the direction of Dr. R. B. Chamberlin.

THE MELTING POT

The early inhabitants of Twinsburg and the surrounding area were mound-building Indians. Some historians believe the mounds were built for religious purposes because altars were found inside. The customs of these Indians were similar to those in the Orient. They were warlike people, engaged in agriculture, and were skilled in making metal implements. They worshipped the elements, such as fire, air, and water.

By 1726 most of the Indians, whose ancestors had lived in the area for centuries, ceded their land to the English by signing treaties, making way for the settlement of this land by the white population.

Today, in Twinsburg, there are many families with varied backgrounds as Russian, Hungarian, Irish, Negro, German, English, Jewish, Chinese, Polish, Italian, French, and Spanish. Such a variety of nationalities has made Twinsburg a true cosmopolitan area. (Ginny Cleveland and Carole Crouse)

THE RAILROAD COMES

When the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railway Company was preparing to build a road between Cleveland and Pittsburgh, Twinsburg was along the route proposed. Naturally there were people, owners of stage property, those who lived along the stage route, etc., who disagreed with the plan. At any rate so much hostility to the plan was evidenced that the railroad was finally located three and a half miles west of the center.

In 1880, the Connotton Valley RR was built, passing one-half mile east of the center. Following Tinkers Creek, the RR extended from Cleveland to Canton and on to Bowerstown in Harrison County. It later became the Cleveland and Canton. For several years it was known as the Wheeling and Lake Erie. Since Twinsburg was so close to Cleveland, larger amounts of milk could be shipped from there to Cleveland with less chance of the milk spoiling. This was important at this time because the refrigerated cars had not yet been developed.

Mr. John W. Fessenden really kept busy with his music activities which were free to all. Wednesday evenings, he taught beginners the basics of music; Friday evenings, instrumental music; and Sunday evenings, sacred music. At the close of each school term, a concert was given, and afterwards, the Samuel Bissell Family served an oyster supper. For a long time, Mr. Fessenden conducted the Congregational Church Choir, which became the best country church choir in the Western Reserve area. In the summer, Mr. Fessenden conducted a singing school for children. In the fall, the participating children gave a concert for the townsfolk. The best singers in the concert were featured later in the Twinsburg fairs. The singing school was considered a social institution and was always popular in Twinsburg. (Lynn Roseberry)
